7 U.S. officers punished as probe of Iraq prison abuse grows

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | The U.S. military has reprimanded seven officers in the alleged abuse of inmates at Baghdad's notorious Abu Ghraib prison, the first known punishments in the case, an official said Monday.

The American officer who oversaw the prison, Brig. Gen. Janis Karpinski, said evidence suggests many more troops might have been involved.

The soldiers were reprimanded on the orders of Lt. Gen. Ricardo Sanchez, commander of U.S. forces in Iraq. Six of them — officers and noncommissioned officers — received the most severe administrative reprimand in the U.S. military, a military official said, speaking on condition of anonymity. A seventh officer received a more lenient admonishment. Two of the officers were relieved of their duties.

The official said he believed the seven officers would not face further action or court-martial, but the reprimands could end their careers. Another six U.S. servicemembers also may face criminal charges.

The U.S.-appointed Iraqi Governing Council condemned the alleged abuse, terming it a violation of international law and the Geneva Conventions. It demanded that U.S. authorities allow Iraqi judges to take part in the interrogation of prisoners and open the detention centers to inspection by Iraqi officials.

Last week, CBS's "60 Minutes II" broadcast images allegedly showing Iraqis stripped naked, hooded and being tormented by their U.S. captors. An internal U.S. Army report found that Iraqi detainees were subjected to "sadistic, blatant and wanton criminal abuses," according to The New Yorker magazine. JIM KRANE (AP)

ART Big Bird

Benjamin Verdonck is one strange bird. Here the Belgian actor/artist tries to start conversations with passersby from a giant nest about 100 feet up the side of a building in Brussels on Monday as part of a seven-day public performance. "The Great Swallow" tells the story of a man who arrives, observes, speaks and, driven by his desire to embrace his audience, ultimately falls from his nest. Or something like that ... (EXPRESS)

SEPARATIONS Fowl Bureaucrats

An elderly Hong Kong widow whose beloved pet rooster's crowing drew complaints from neighbors has reluctantly given the bird away after a castration operation failed to shut him up, the South China Morning Post reported Monday. The 61-year-old woman said she slept in the same bed as the rooster and "cried and cried for weeks" after parting with it about a month ago, the Post reported. The widow defied public housing rules by keeping the rooster, along with three ducks and two hens, in her apartment. (AP)

COMEUPPANCES Naked Folk Ahoy!

Partygoers apparently hoping to catch a glimpse of nude sunbathers rushed to one side of a barge Sunday, prompting the ship to capsize and dump all 60 people into an Austin, Texas, lake. Two people were injured when the barge sank near Hippy Hollow, the only public nude beach in Texas. The accident occurred during Splash Day, an event hosted at the clothing-optional area by the Austin Tavern Guild, a gay and lesbian bar and nightclub association. (AP)

LAWS Save the Serpent

Legend has it that a giant serpent has lived for centuries in lake Storsjoen, Sweden's fifth-largest lake. Now a government watchdog is asking why a regional council placed the mythical monster on Sweden's endangered species list. The listing was discovered during a review of why a businessman, who said he wanted to raise monster babies, was denied permission to search for its eggs. Officials are looking into the legal ramifications of the 1986 listing and whether it can be scrapped. (AP)

FINDINGS Sex Drive

As if BMW drivers need more proof of their own superiority, the German magazine Men's Car reports in its inaugural May issue that Beamer owners have more sex than drivers of any other cars. The magazine's survey found that male BMW drivers report having sex on average 2.2 times a week. Porsche drivers, by comparison, do it a mere 1.4 times a week.

Among women, drivers of French cars were the most sexually active, having sex 2.1 times a week.

Bush's Bus Visits Hard-Hit States

President concedes Mich., Ohio job woes; Kerry unveils new ads

KALAMAZOO, MICH. | President Bush, winding his way by bus through job-strapped Michigan and Ohio, acknowledged on Monday that the region is still in the throes of an ailing economy while warning that Democratic challenger John Kerry is not the steady leader America needs.

Bush told Republican-friendly audiences that "when the president speaks, he better mean what he says," and also said that in time of war, "what the country needs is a leader who speaks clearly."

The reference was to Kerry, whom the Bush campaign has tried to portray as a candidate who lacks conviction. As Bush campaigned, Kerry unveiled new ads that tout his "lifetime of service and strength."

Bush pointed out that the economy is showing signs of growth nationwide, "but lags in Michigan, I understand that."

He also acknowledged his doubts on the war in Iraq. "They're wondering whether or not politics will cause the politicians to change their minds in the midst of this transfer of sovereignty," he said. "I'm not changing my mind."

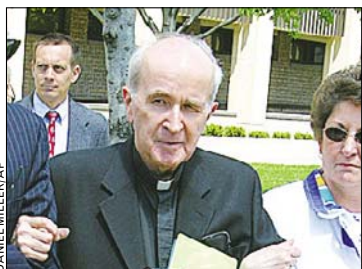

Bush's convoy of eight buses began in Indiana and sped across the southern border of Michigan. Voters along the way have a history of swinging between Democratic and Republican candidates.

Michigan has lost 223,900 jobs since Bush took office, and the unemployment rate has climbed from 4.6 percent to 6.9 percent. In Ohio, where Bush travels on Tuesday, 222,600 jobs have been lost and the unemployment rate has risen from 3.9 percent to 5.7 percent. RON FOURNIER (AP)

The Rev. Gerald Robinson faces murder charges for the 1980 killing of a nun.

Catholic Priest Indicted in Nun's Death

TOLEDO, OHIO | A Roman Catholic priest has been indicted on an aggravated murder charge in the slaying of a nun 24 years ago.

A grand jury met Friday to consider the charge against the Rev. Gerald Robinson, but its decision was not announced until Monday.

Robinson was arrested April 23 in the strangling and stabbing of Sister Margaret Ann Pahl, 71, during Easter weekend in 1980. He was long a suspect in her death.

The nun's body was discovered in a chapel at Mercy Hospital, covered by an altar cloth. Investigators have described it as a "ritualistic" slaying that has the Toledo Diocese looking into claims of satanic sex abuse by priests.

Robinson was released from jail Monday after supporters put together enough property to post a $400,000 property bond to cover his $200,000 bail. He said nothing before getting into a sport utility vehicle that was waiting for him.

Robinson's attorney said his client will plead innocent. (AP)

New Worm Hits Computers

'Sasser' activates without clicking on attachment

NEW YORK | A pesky computer worm snarled hundreds of thousands of machines worldwide Monday in the latest virus-like outbreak to take advantage of a known flaw of the Windows operating system.

Because the new worm, dubbed "Sasser," does not require users to click on an e-mail attachment to activate, it spreads more rapidly than most viruses. It was discovered late Friday and spread as employees returned to work and booted their machines.

Sasser does not cause any permanent damage to files or machines, security experts said.

Once Sasser infects a computer, it automatically scans the Internet for other computers with the flaw and sends a copy of itself there.

Keynote Systems Inc., which tracks Internet performance, reported no traffic degradation.

Microsoft Corp. announced three weeks ago the flaw being exploited — a Windows function called Local Security Authority Subsystem Service — but many had yet to apply the software fix the company had released.

Microsoft recommended owners of Windows 2000 and XP install software patches from <http://windowsupdate.microsoft.com>. (AP)

Ga. High Court Overturns Teen's 10-Year Sentence

ATLANTA | The Georgia Supreme Court on Monday threw out a black high school football star's conviction and 10-year prison sentence for having sex with an underage white girl — a case that led to allegations of racism and heavy-handed prosecution.

The court ruled 4-3 that 18-year-old Marcus Dixon should have been prosecuted solely on the lesser charge of misdemeanor statutory rape rather than aggravated child molestation.

Dixon, who also was an honor student at Pepperell High School in Rome, had claimed he was targeted by prosecutors because he is black and the girl, who was 15 at the time, is white.

He was acquitted of rape but found guilty of aggravated child molestation, which carries a 10-year sentence, and statutory rape. The high court let stand the statutory rape conviction, which is punishable by up to a year behind bars.

Prosecutor Leigh Patterson said she would ask the Supreme Court to reconsider. MARK NIESSE (AP)

A New Jersey prosecutor confirmed that the underwear and other items were collected in March. (AP)

U.S. Troops Clash With Shiite Militia

Forces in Najaf face stiff resistance from radical cleric's fighters

NAJAF, IRAQ | U.S. forces in Najaf came under their most intense attack yet by Shiite militiamen in a clash Monday that may have killed up to 20 Iraqis. But the military still held back from going after the militia's leader, a radical cleric, to avoid angering Iraq's Shiite majority.

Before dawn Monday, militiamen shelled U.S. troops with about 20 mortars, hitting in and around the base in Najaf where U.S. troops replaced Spanish forces a week ago. There were no casualties.

U.S. troops opened fire in the afternoon from several directions. Tank and machine-gun fire demolished a building that troops said was the source of shooting, raising a pillar of smoke. Apache attack helicopters circled but did not fire.

Lt. Col. Pat White estimated 20 militiamen were killed in the battle and said there were few civilian casualties. At a Najaf hospital, one slain Iraqi policeman and 16 wounded civilians were brought in, including a woman, who hospital officials said were hit by American fire.

The U.S. military is deployed around Najaf to crack down on radical Shiite cleric Muqtada al-Sadr and his militia. But the troops have held back because the military fears angering Shiites, whose holiest site in Iraq is near the U.S. base.

White said the troops would "maintain our defense posture" until someone "much, much higher than

Details of U.S. Hostage's Escape Emerge

BAGHDAD | American hostage Thomas Hamill was sitting in a mud shack with a bullet wound festering in his arm when he heard the rumble of Army Humvees and made a break for it.

"He was yelling, 'I'm an American, I'm an American POW,'" recalled Lt. Joseph Merrill, a member of the Army platoon that happened upon the grizzled Mississippi contract worker north of Baghdad on Sunday morning.

As Hamill whooped, soldiers radioed in that a farmer was approaching them. Hamill tripped and fell a few times, rising each time. Soon the soldiers understood he was shouting in English and somebody recognized him, Merrill said.

Hamill, 43, was taken Monday to a U.S. military medical facility in Germany for treatment and a reunion with his wife.

His whereabouts had been unknown since guerrillas captured him after an ambush April 9 on a supply convoy, during which he was wounded in the right forearm. (AP)

Sharon to Modify Gaza Pullout Plan

Israeli premier says withdrawal to proceed despite voters' rejection

JERUSALEM | Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon said Monday he will come up with an alternative withdrawal plan after his proposal to pull out of the Gaza Strip and parts of the West Bank was soundly rejected by members of his Likud Party.

Israeli officials suggested the original plan — which envisioned a withdrawal from Gaza, home to 7,500 settlers, and the evacuation of four small settlements in the West Bank — would be slightly scaled down and the new version would not be put to a Likud vote.

"There will be another plan," Sharon told a meeting of Likud lawmakers, according to one of the participants.

Sharon had proposed his "disengagement plan," which had U.S. backing and was popular with Israelis, as the best way to obtain security for Israel. Members of his pro-settler party disagreed, however, voting against the plan 60 percent to 40 percent in a nonbinding referendum Sunday.

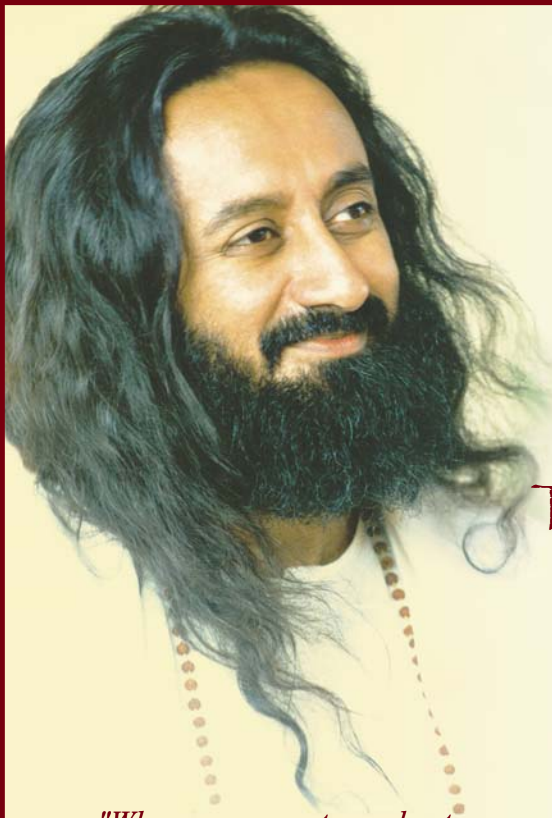

Residents of the Gaza settlement of Neve Dekalim, who had energetically campaigned against the plan, symbolically declared victory Monday by laying the cornerstone for a new neighborhood. "It says we're here to stay," said Esther Lilienthal, 67.

Israel occupied the West Bank and Gaza — now home to some 3.5 million Palestinians — in the 1967 war. The Palestinians consider the settlements in these areas, which house about 220,000 Israelis, to be illegal. RAVI NESSMAN (AP)

Ehrlich's Son Has Surgery

Eight-week-old child is expected to make full recovery after scare

BALTIMORE | Gov. Robert Ehrlich's 8-week-old son was recovering Monday from emergency surgery to clear an obstruction between his stomach and small intestine, the governor's office said.

Joshua Taylor Ehrlich, born March 6, was taken to a pediatrician after vomiting for seven days, said Dr. Roger Voigt, chief of pediatric surgery for the University of Maryland Medical Center in Baltimore, who operated on the boy.

Joshua was doing well Monday afternoon and expected to make a full recovery from the hour-long operation, Voigt said. He was already eating formula and should leave the hospital by Tuesday afternoon. He would only need to be given Tylenol for pain relief.

The governor cleared his schedule Monday, and he and the first lady were spending the day at the hospital, his office said.

The child was suffering from a condition known as pyloric stenosis, a narrowing or blockage of the pylorus, a structure that connects the stomach to the small intestine.

Joshua Taylor Ehrlich — cuddled by his parents, Md. Gov. Robert Ehrlich and Kendel Ehrlich, after his birth in March — is recovering from emergency surgery.

Symptoms include vomiting, diarrhea, dehydration and weight loss. The narrowing is caused by overdeveloped muscles in the pylorus that prevent the stomach from emptying. Its cause is unknown. Voigt said that with a small cut to the pylorus, it "cracked open like a walnut." The muscles will come back together in the next couple of weeks and Joshua should have no further problems, he said. SARAH BRUMFIELD (AP)

Md. Train Stop to Start Security Tests

WASHINGTON | Passengers at a suburban Maryland train stop will be guinea pigs for a government rail safety experiment featuring a "puffer" machine that sniffs the air and analyzes it for traces of explosives.

The Transportation Security Administration begins a pilot project Tuesday at the stop in New Carrollton, about 9 miles northeast of Washington. Passengers will walk through the machine, which sucks in the air around them and within seconds determines if the person has been in contact with explosives.

The 30-day pilot program also includes a baggage screening machine used in overseas airports. New Carrollton is served by Amtrak and commuter rail service.

WHEATON, MD. | State scientists plan to compare the DNA of a northern snakehead caught last week in a Montgomery County lake to that of snakeheads found in a Crofton pond in 2002.

The comparison could tell the state's Department of Natural Resources if the Montgomery fish was related to the more than 1,000 discovered in the Crofton case.

Steve Early of DNR's fisheries division said the testing, which likely won't take place for a few months, is mostly a "curiosity" to try to determine the origin of the Wheaton snakehead, which is now frozen. (AP)

Star Dot-Com Banker Guilty

Quattrone convicted of obstructing justice, witness tampering

NEW YORK | Frank Quattrone, a star investment banker during the Internet stock bubble, was convicted Monday of obstructing justice by sending a 22-word e-mail encouraging colleagues to destroy files while a criminal probe of the bank was under way.

A federal jury in Manhattan returned guilty verdicts on all three counts against Quattrone — obstructing a grand jury, obstructing federal regulators and witness tampering.

The verdict likely means Quattrone, 48, will go to prison, perhaps for more than a year. He was tried last fall on the same charges, but the judge declared a mistrial after jurors deadlocked.

Quattrone

His lawyer, John W. Kecker, said that an appeal was planned. The prosecution had no immediate comment.

Quattrone rose to stardom in the late 1990s. He took technology companies like Amazon.com and Netscape public and made $120 million at Credit Suisse First Boston in 2000.

The case against him turned on an e-mail he sent to his subordinates at CSFB on Dec. 5, 2000, reminding them to “clean up” their files. Prosecutors said that was obstruction because Quattrone had been told on Dec. 3 by a top CSFB lawyer that the bank was the subject of a criminal investigation.

The government was looking into whether some CSFB clients had paid excessive commissions — essentially kickbacks — in exchange for getting a piece of hot initial public offerings of stock.

But Quattrone insisted that the investigation was not on his mind when he sent the document-destruction e-mail. ERIN MCCLAM (AP)

Government Finds Pattern of Racism At Cracker Barrel

WASHINGTON | Black customers at many Cracker Barrel restaurants were seated in areas segregated from white patrons, received inferior service and often were made to wait longer for tables, according to a Justice Department civil rights settlement announced Monday.

Cracker Barrel agreed to end discriminatory practices alleged in a government lawsuit filed in U.S.

District Court in Atlanta. The lawsuit contends that Cracker Barrel violated the 1964 Civil Rights Act by “engaging in a pattern or practice of discrimination.”

While agreeing to a number of operational changes, Cracker Barrel did not admit wrongdoing and will pay no fines, spokeswoman Julie Davis said. The law does not permit the Justice Department to seek fines in such cases.

Cracker Barrel has been the target of several lawsuits filed by black customers. The Justice Department settlement will have no direct effect on those cases. CURT ANDERSON (AP)

WHO KNEW? Since Congress deregulated the cable industry in 1996, rates have increased by 53% while inflation has risen only 19%. Members of the Senate Commerce Committee recently warned that pressure from angry constituents is leading them to look at ways to hold down rates — including forcing cable providers to let subscribers choose individual channels. FAMILY FRIEND: The Bakers bask in the gentle glow of their digital video recorder.

Attack of the TiVo Clones

VIDEO | Debra Baker tells people she has TiVo. But she really doesn't.

The 33-year-old New York tax consultant has a variant — a digital video recorder offered through her cable company.

So, like many others, Baker simply uses the leading DVR brand as the catchall term for the new love in her lounging life.

It's a flattering curse for TiVo, whose revolutionary technology records TV programs without the hassles of videotape.

The key ingredients of a DVR are a hard drive to store video, an electronic programming guide to facilitate recording and software to tie together the technology and give the user navigational control.

DVRs are primarily reaching the mass market through cable companies, and TiVo has yet to get its software, including its widely touted user interface, into their DVR-equipped set-top boxes. They are instead using unbranded DVR software from their longtime set-top-box suppliers — Scientific Atlanta and Motorola.

TiVo's code also is missing from Panasonic's combination DVD Recorder-DVR and Mitsubishi's upcoming HDTV receiver with a 120-gigabyte DVR. Sharp is building DVR capabilities directly into some of its LCD TVs, again without TiVo.

But as DVRs gain in popularity — Forrester predicts nearly half of American households will have a DVR by 2009 — TiVo may be hard-pressed to hold on to its leading market share. MAY WONG (AP)

Sweatin' to the Oldies, Sort of

Burn calories while doing 'the skank' at punk rock aerobics

FITNESS | It's three o'clock on a Saturday afternoon and the small crowd gathered in the dimly lit nightclub is pumped and sweaty.

In Punk Rock Aerobics, exercisers jump, head-bang, kick and punch to hits by The Ramones, Sex Pistols and other indie-rock favorites. There's no gym, no mirrors, no dress code and, "No more sucky classes full of brain-dead bim-bos in spandex thongs," according to the Web site.

"At first I was skeptical," said Amy Monaghan of Boston. "But then you get moving and it's really fun."

The routines and moves, including "You Be the Star Air Guitar" (arms swing like a windmill) and "the skank" (marching aggressively in place), are loosely based on the punk ethic of simplicity and intensity.

"A lot of the songs have three chords, so we keep the routines to three moves per song," said co-founder Maura Jasper.

Jasper, a graphics designer and nanny, thought up Punk Rock Aerobics with friend and singer

Instructor Hilken Mancini leads the class in "You Be the Star Air Guitar."

Hilken Mancini three years ago. Together, the women, both thirtysomethings from Boston and certified aerobics instructors, published a 208-page illustrated book outlining the program earlier this year.

Jasper and Mancini have a loyal following at their weekly sessions in Cambridge, and they've recently added another class across the Charles River in Boston's Allston neighborhood. There is a nominal $7 to $8 charge for a 90-minute workout.

Today, about a dozen gather at the nightclub for class — and yes, one man does have blue hair.

Garnett Rocks the Vote

Minnesota forward easily wins first MVP award

PRO BASKETBALL | The Kid can be called "MVP," too.

Kevin Garnett of the Minnesota Timberwolves won his first NBA Most Valuable Player award Monday, easily beating two-time winner Tim Duncan and Jermaine O'Neal.

Garnett received 120 of 123 first-place votes in balloting by the Pro Basketball Writer's Association for a total of 1,219 points. San Antonio's Duncan got 716 points, while Indiana's O'Neal had 523.

Garnett led Minnesota to a 58-24 record and the top playoff seeding in the Western Conference, averaging 24.2 points and a league-leading 13.9 rebounds.

He joined Larry Bird as the only players to average at least 20 points, 10 rebounds and five assists for five consecutive years.

Garnett credited team vice president Kevin McHale, who played with Bird for the Boston Celtics.

"This is best situation I could ever think of, or dream of," Garnett said. "I had to believe I could get there, because of him and his belief in me."

McHale had high praise for his team's superstar. "He reminds me of how basketball should be played, with passion, hard work and discipline," he said of Garnett.

No Triple Crown? Jones Might Skip The Preakness

HORSE RACING | Kentucky Derby winner Smarty Jones has some work to do to even make it to Baltimore in two weeks for the second leg of the Triple Crown.

"If he does go back to the track and I don't like the way he's training, then he's not going," trainer John Servis said Sunday, one day after winning the Derby. "If I'm not as confident as I was this week, we'll skip it. There are too many races down the line."

The Preakness Stakes takes places May 15. (AP)

Singh Flying High After Late Birdie

25-foot-putt on final hole lands star his second title in a row

GOLF | Vijay Singh made a 25-foot birdie on the 18th hole Monday to win the rain-delayed HP Classic, denying Masters champion Phil Mickelson his second straight victory and Joe Ogilvie his first title.

Singh overcame a six-shot deficit in the last eight holes, using an eagle on No. 15 to shoot 29 on the back nine for a round of 63.

Ogilvie almost forced a playoff after Singh's putt, but his blast out of the sand trap missed by an inch.

Vijay Singh is the first player this year to have won 3 PGA Tour events.

Singh finished at 266 and became the first three-time winner on the tour this season, taking $918,000 of the $5.1 million purse. He also won last Monday at the rain-interrupted Houston Open.

Mickelson, playing in his first tournament since winning the Masters, and Ogilvie were a stroke back at 267.

Singh had five birdies and an eagle on the back nine. Mickelson was tied for second going into the final round. Playing in the same group as Ogilvie, he made birdies on 15, 16, and 18 for a 4-under 68.

Family, Friends Remember Tillman

Memorial honors NFL safety-turned-soldier

MEMORIAL | Before Pat Tillman was hailed as a national hero for leaving the NFL to fight and die in the mountains of Afghanistan, he was a high school football star with a bright life ahead of him.

Friends, family and other admirers gathered Monday to mourn Tillman in his hometown of San Jose, Calif. — to remember a man so moved by the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks that he walked away from a multimillion-dollar contract with the Arizona Cardinals to join the U.S. Army.

"The underlying thing was his courage and selflessness on the athletic field, in his community and now as a soldier," NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue said before the afternoon service.

Tillman, 27, died April 22 in a firefight near the Pakistan border while helping comrades caught in an ambush.

The Army gave few details of how Tillman was killed, but said he was fatally shot while fighting "without regard for his personal safety."

Tillman attended San Jose's Leland High School and was drafted by the Cardinals after starring at Arizona State. He became the Cardinals' starting safety and broke the franchise record for tackles in 2000.

His death was one of about 100 U.S. soldiers to have been killed in Afghanistan since the United States

Shirley Caldwell was one of many admirers to attend Monday's memorial of former Arizona Cardinals player Pat Tillman, who was killed in Afghanistan last month.

In Brief

MURDER-FOR-HIRE PLOT Danton Back in St. Louis For Arraignment on Tuesday

Blues forward Mike Danton returned to the St. Louis area from California on Monday to face charges in an alleged murder-for-hire plot, a federal marshal said. He was being held in the Clinton County, Ill., jail, near St. Louis. Danton will be arraigned Tuesday in an East St. Louis federal court, U.S. Attorney Ronald Tenpas's office said. Federal authorities said that Danton, with 19-year-old Katie Wolfmeyer's help, tried to hire a hit man for $10,000 to murder an unidentified acquaintance. (AP)

NHL PLAYOFFS Esche Practices for Flyers

Flyers goalie Robert Esche, who left Sunday's game after the first period because he was dizzy and dehydrated, practiced Monday and could start Game 6 Tuesday against the Toronto Maple Leafs after leaving Game 5 with flu symptoms. Defenseman Vladimir Malakhov is doubtful, however, for Tuesday's game because he injured his head during Philadelphia's 7-2 victory Sunday. Philadelphia leads the series 3-2. (AP)

PRO BASKETBALL More Prep Stars in Draft

Three high school players said Monday they will enter the NBA draft, although none will hire an agent. J.R. Smith of St. Benedict's in Newark, N.J., Al Jefferson of Prentiss (Miss.) High School and Shaun Livingston of Peoria (Ill.) Central High School. All three had signed letters of intent: Smith with North Carolina, Jefferson with Arkansas and Livingston with Duke. The players have until June 17 to remove their names from the draft. Overall, five high school stars have declared for the June 24 draft. (AP)

Gross Prose Growth

Kids are crazy about 'poop fiction,' but at least they're reading

LITERATURE | The content may seem off-color, but potty humor is big in the world of popular children's literature — from the "Captain Underpants" series to such best-selling titles as "Zombie Butts From Uranus!" — and some parents and authors believe the genre is attracting otherwise reluctant readers.

"You gotta give kids something they want to read," said Glenn Murray, an educator-turned-children's author from Canada.

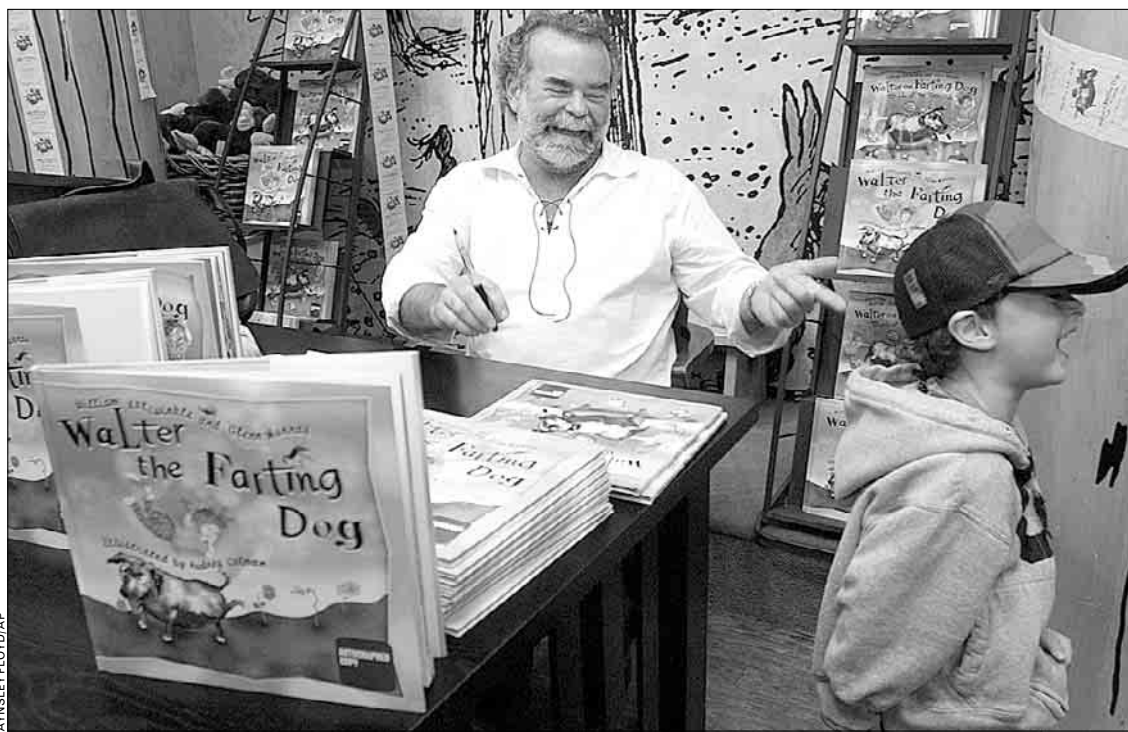

Murray co-wrote two books (with William Kotzwinkle) featuring "Walter the Farting Dog," a flatulent pooch whose problem saves the day. The author believes his smelly protagonist is an ambassador for literacy.

Parents jokingly call the genre the kid's version of pulp fiction — or "poop fiction." The books regularly appear on children's best-seller lists.

Kaylee Paul, a 6-year-old from Riverside, Calif., has latched onto the "Captain Underpants" series written by Dav Pilkey. Her favorite is about the "Big, Bad Battle of the Bionic Booger Boy."

"I like to read it every day. I really, really do," Kaylee said.

Derek Morgan, an 11-year-old

IT'S A GAS: Glenn Murray, author of the "Walter" series, shares a laugh with Leo Friedman, 5, at a book signing in Chicago.

Chicagoan, recently picked up the second Walter picture book, subtitled "Trouble at the Yard Sale."

"If you want to laugh," the fifth-grader said, "read this book."

Scholastic also publishes "Zombie Butts from Uranus!" by Andy Griffiths. It's the sequel to "The Day My Butt Went Psycho." Gail Glover, a mom from Port Crane, N.Y., bought the latter for 9-year-old son Robbie, but later wondered if she'd made a mistake.

She noted, however, that her son still likes to read the Harry Potter and "Lord of the Rings" books, as well as works by Roald Dahl and Jack London.

Those are the books he should be reading, say some parents who've persuaded their school libraries to take titles like these off their shelves. "I don't want to be a prude about it," said Sister St. John Delany, a nun who heads the School of Education at New York's Pace University. "I just don't think kids need to be exposed to that kind of language."

But Murray still hopes his books become a classic of another breed.

While he and Kotzwinkle wrote the first book more than a decade ago, it took several more years to persuade a publisher to print it.

Now each book carries a simple dedication: "For everyone who's ever felt misjudged or misunderstood."

'Rejoicing' in Eccentric Songs

MUSIC | There were flashes of outright brilliance on Devendra Banhart's 2002 debut, but the fragmentary nature of tunes on "Oh Me Oh My ..." made it tough to tell how his eccentricities would translate to a more slickly made record, as opposed to ideas captured on damaged four-tracks in friends' apartments.

Given the more consistent luster of "Rejoicing in the Hands" (Young Gods Records), it's fair to say that Banhart's quirks have translated well. His music retains its spontaneous fragility, as if the songs might dissipate like smoke in a breeze.

There's a bluesy feel to some of Banhart's acoustic picking, though these are not blues tunes as such. They don't fit easily into any category, in fact, though there are also elements of folk and psychedelia.

Banhart sings in a quivery voice over arrangements of varying complexity. "Dogs They Make Up the Dark" consists only of acoustic guitar and Banhart singing a melody that rises and falls like the sea. Ominous strings swell in the background of "A Sight To Behold," and amorphous slide-guitar lines hover over "When the Sun Shone on Vetiver" in a way that evokes early Pink Floyd — something from, say, "Ummagumma" or "More."

HIPPIE SHAKE: Banhart's songs are still quirky despite slicker recording.

His lyrics seem less like the streams of consciousness that characterized his first record, though no one is likely to mistake his eclectic ruminations for straightforward storytelling. There's no sense in trying too hard to decipher what, exactly, he is singing about, though. It's better just to bask in his unusual songcraft and do as Banhart advises on "This Is the Way."

"We have a choice," he sings. "We choose rejoice." ERIC R. DANTON (THE HARTFORD COURANT)

Inching Toward Hitsville

Ron Sexsmith makes exquisite albums; why isn't he famous?

PERSONALITY | Over the last few years, Canadian singer-songwriter Ron Sexsmith has seen the term "breakthrough" associated with each new album.

While 2001's "Blue Boy" and 2002's "Cobblestone Runway" put him closer to grasping that larger but precious audience, there's a feeling he may have finally struck gold with his seventh and latest Nettwerk studio effort, "Retriever."

"I think it's probably the poppiest

Sexsmith is this close — again — to breaking through to the mainstream.

record I've made or most accessible, perhaps," said Sexsmith.

"Retriever" is loaded with his infectious pop melodies combined with timeless yet economical lyrical vignettes. He says it's a blending of love songs mixed with state-of-the-world ideas. One notable difference is the fuller sound, including strings on several tracks.

"We definitely wanted to make more of an electric album," he said. "I think there are about seven songs on it where the strings are kind of going nuts."

The album's 12 songs range from the well-crafted "Hard Bargain" and reflective "Dandelion Wine" to richer pop tunes such as "Not About To Lose" and "Wishing Well," the latter two with shades of Coldplay, for whom he has opened.

Sexsmith plans to begin an extensive American tour next month before heading out to other parts of the world for the rest of the year.

As for the album title, Sexsmith originally thought about calling it "Golden Retriever," but that moniker had already been used for a song by Welsh band Super Furry Animals. Not wanting to look like he "ripped them off," he simply removed the adjective.

"This idea of trying to retrieve a situation and make it right again," he said. "And it's kind of the unspoken sentiment in all of my albums — you're standing there with the dog and you say, 'Go get him.'" JASON MACNEIL (BILLBOARD.COM)

Hello, We Must Be Going

'Drew Carey' is still on the air, but not for long

FINALES | A long-running comedy taped its final episode a few weeks ago, and few people outside its Hollywood set were aware of it.

The finale of "The Drew Carey Show" is expected to air on ABC sometime this summer.

That the show is even in its ninth season has more to do with a bad business deal than any sense viewers want to see it.

Carey's show once was one of ABC's crown jewels. In the 1996-97 season, it averaged 17 million viewers.

In 2001, ABC reached a deal with Warner Bros. Television, the show's producers, to keep it on the air through 2004.

Then the bottom fell out.

It's not clear whether viewers simply tired of the amiable, bespectacled comedian, who logged a lot of facetime on the network between his own show and "Whose Line Is It Anyway?"

Or they may simply have tired of trying to find "The Drew Carey Show." The program premiered on Wednesday nights, where it has inhabited four separate time slots. It's also been shown regularly on Tuesdays. And Thursdays. And Fridays. And Mondays.

Carey's mug was ubiquitous for a while, which may have soured viewers.

By the middle of last season, ABC took it off the air, and burned off many of the show's episodes during the summer.

ABC didn't even bother putting it on this season. New episodes will premiere on June 2, and the network will show two first-run episodes a week during the summer.

‘Nashville’ Anoints Star

Brad Cotter, the latest TV-crowned idol, is no musical newbie

COUNTRY STAR SEARCH | A 33-year-old man from Alabama who has been trying to land a major label record deal for years was chosen as the winner of the reality talent show “Nashville Star.”

Brad Cotter edged out two other finalists, George Canyon and Matt Lindahl, on Saturday to win the title and a recording contract with Sony Music Nashville.

As a youth, Cotter recorded five gospel albums and enjoyed regional success in Auburn, Ala.

BORN BRAD: Cotter sings, plays, wins.

He moved to Nashville in 1993, where he has been singing demo tapes and writing songs for publishing companies.

Cotter's debut single, "I Meant To," which he co-wrote and performed during the finale, will ship to country radio Monday.

"Nashville Star" combines country music with reality television by placing contestants in a wired house on Music Row as they compete for a recording contract with Sony Music Nashville.

Cameras capture their daily interaction and weekly live performances, which are judged by USA Network viewers and industry professionals. (AP)

WHAT'S YOUR HURRY?

Television seasons: when do they begin? And when do they end? Does anybody care anymore? Can we have a show of hands from folks planning their night around tonight's season finale of SCRUBS (9:30 p.m., NBC)? Were you anticipating the finales of "Whoopi"? "Happy Family"? "I'm With Her"? "It's All Relative"? "Married to the Kellys"? If so, you missed them.

ONLINE '24'-7

Fans of Kiefer Sutherland's "24" who can't wait for the next thrill-packed episode can access the "Webshow" 24INSIDE at www.24inside.com. It kicks off at 10 p.m. tonight, with Daphne Brogdon hosting a discussion dissecting the just-completed episode. Each of four Webshows will air for seven days between on-air episodes.

MORE THAN MEETS THE EYE

NOVA (8 p.m., PBS) explores the promise and limitations of America's high-tech military. The collapse of the Taliban regime in Afghanistan and Saddam Hussein's dictatorship in Iraq seemed to validate Donald Rumsfeld's push for "transformation," an effort to make the military leaner, quicker and more lethal using the latest in technology. But critics contend that the Pentagon's infatuation with transformation blinded them to the need for a massive conventional force to occupy, pacify and democratize Iraq.

IT'S JASMINE'S TURN

AMERICAN IDOL (8 p.m., Fox) The final five sing. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Letters

TO THE EDITOR

IN MONDAY'S EXPRESS, letter writer Ayeh Bandeh-Ahmadi asks what causes the mindset that led to abuse of Iraqi prisoners. We do. We ignore abuse of citizens in our own prisons. And when comedians deliver smirking one-liners about what happens in prisons, especially to celebrities, do we object? No. Since it isn't necessarily "official" and we can't see it, why care about felons abusing felons? Despite the demands of our Constitution, we the people not only condone abuse of prisoners, we giggle about it.

Washington, D.C.

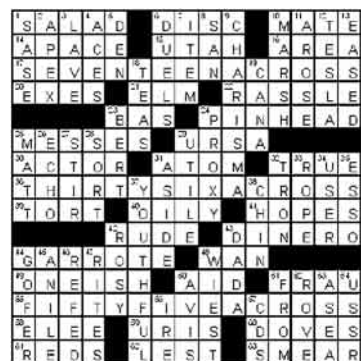

MONDAY'S PICTURE of the topless woman in the body-art contest in the Ukraine ("Flesh Paint") was truly an eye-opener. I hope you don't catch grief for publishing it. The naked body as art is a valid expression of beauty, innocence and humanity. Also, regarding the picture of the pandas at the zoo: Someone should inform them that the position they're in is for pleasure, not impregnation. They appear to have learned from "The Joy of Sex." Perhaps a more scientific manual would enhance their chance for success.

—TERRY NILES
Springfield, Va.

'Super Size Me'

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

Filmmaker MORGAN SPURLOCK was online Monday to discuss "Super Size Me," his film about 30 days of eating only McDonald's food and the effect it had on his health.

Have you eaten at McDonald's since filming the documentary?

I have not eaten in a McDonald's in over a year.

What was your favorite thing to eat at McDonald's? Least favorite?

By far the Big Macs are my favorite and the least is the Filet-O-Fish. Those things just taste terrible.

How much did your month at McDonald's cost?

I spent about $788 on my McDiet.

Have you gotten back to your pre-McDiet weight?

Yes, about a month ago I finally reached my baseline weight of 185 pounds.

Given your obvious agenda, it's fair to ask who paid for this film to be made? There's a whole industry of lawyers who want to be able to sue McDonald's.

I paid for the entire film myself out of my own pocket. I have no ties to any of those people — no ties to any lawyers or lobby groups or any other non-fast food entity.

What are your qualifications for giving people dietary advice?

I don't give people dietary advice. I just made a movie that presents the facts of what happened to me and any information that I relay was information told to me by the experts we interviewed for the film.

Do you ever think that McDonald's will take KGB-like measures to silence you?

There is some clown in a trench coat standing outside my window right now.
